I think that it was good for Auggie to go to school because he grew as a person. He made friends who were nice to him (well, most of the time). He also experienced what it feels like to be a normal kid. Finally near the end of the book he was accepted by his classmates and some kids in his school. Auggie felt that he shouldn't be embarrassed about his face like he used to and he didn't have to hang his head low.

The story also wouldn't have been interesting without him going to school!
